

Experts Guide

Climate Change and the Environment

THE ENVIRONMENT

Tim Hamilton

Tim Hamilton is an assistant professor of economics in the Robins School of Business. He is an expert in environmental economics. He is a co-author of the Ecological Economics article “Amenity values of proximity to National Wildlife Refuges: An analysis of urban residential property values.”

Mary Finley-Brook

Mary Finley-Brook, associate professor of geography and the environment, is an expert in natural resource management and climate change mitigation. Her research specifically focuses on Latin America and the Caribbean and impact on indigenous peoples.

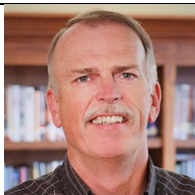

Kristine Grayson

Kristine Grayson, a field ecologist, is a professor in the biology department. Grayson uses the gypsy moth invasion in North America to determine how spread rates change as a species enters new habitats and climates. The project examines how future climate changes will impact the spread of invasive species.

Todd Lookingbill

Todd Lookingbill, an expert in landscape ecology and protected areas management, is an associate professor of geography & the environment. Lookingbill works with the National Park Service, the Forest Service and other management agencies to educate people how to be responsible stewards of natural land.

Steve Nash

Steve Nash, an environmental journalist, is a journalism professor and expert on U.S. national parks. Nash has published science and environment pieces in newspapers throughout the U.S. His latest book investigates issues of public policy and climate change and impacts on national parks.

Peter Smallwood

Peter Smallwood, associate professor of biology, is an expert in conservation biology and science policy. He has previously served as a science advisor to the Senate Homeland Security/Government Affairs Committee and as the director of the Wildlife Conservation Society’s program in Afghanistan.

ENERGY & POLICY

Joel Eisen

Joel Eisen, professor of law, is an expert in energy law and policy, climate change and renewable energy law. Eisen is the co-author of the leading law school textbook on energy law and has published copious pieces on electric utility regulation and renewable energy policy.

David Kitchen

David Kitchen, associate professor of continuing studies, is an expert in climate change and the environment. Kitchen's research is international in scope, focusing on energy use and combating climate change.

Noah Sachs

Noah Sachs, an expert in international energy and environmental law, is a law professor. His research is in climate change, toxic substance and hazardous waste regulation and transboundary pollution. He has conducted research in India on the challenges of implementing market-oriented environmental reforms in developing countries.

SUSTAINABILITY & ORGANIZING

Rob Andrejewski

Rob Andrejewski is the director of sustainability and focuses on increasing sustainability on college campuses. His previous research has been on the connection between time spent outdoors and environmentally responsible behavior.

Ladelle McWhorter

Ladelle McWhorter, an expert in philosophy and political theory, is a professor of Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies. Her research focuses on questions about the ethics of climate change and grassroots organizing to effect political change.

To reach an expert on this list, or for experts for other stories you are working on, please contact:

- Cynthia Price, Director of Media and Public Relations, cprice2@richmond.edu
- Sunni Brown, Assistant Director of Media and Public Relations, sbrown5@richmond.edu
- Lindsey Campbell, Media Relations Specialist, lcampbe4@richmond.edu

Visit our newsroom at news.richmond.edu and follow us on Twitter at @URNews2Use.